All of the media and communications courses offered by Patricia Kelly include a section on writing for the media. Due to popular demand she is now offering one and two-day courses solely devoted to helping clients improve their writing skills, specifically press releases and information brochures. Participants are shown how to make material of immense complexity accessible to a wider audience by turning difficult concepts into comprehensive and easily understandable language.

"Great course, as I was led by a well-experienced Brussels journalist, English native speaker and with a good insider knowledge of the topic. I am very happy to have had the opportunity to attend this course."

European Commission official, course evaluation January 2010